

Radina Banova is a jurist with educational degree “Master of Laws” from the Sofia University St. Kliment Ohridski. As of the present moment she is studying in Organizational Behaviour and Consultancy of Organizations Master’s Program in the Philosophy Faculty by the same university. Radina has worked in the corporate legal sector within the period 2013 – 2018 which has provided her with brighter sight into the not-for-profit law and beyond its borders. She is interested in the sphere of human rights, organizational capacity and team work. As a legal consultant in BCNL she is engaged in legal consultations, preparation of legal statements and research of the national and international legislations. She speaks English and German.

Radina believes that each and any “how?” is possible as far as one has found the answer to the question “why?”. She is convinced that the civic sector is to be legally and organizationally supported as it provides opportunities for the society to develop in a better way.
